Patrick McMillan is the Glenn and Heather Hilliard Professor of Environmental Sustainability at Clemson University, a faculty member in the department of forestry and environmental conservation, and director of the South Carolina Botanical Garden, the Bob Campbell Geology Museum and the Clemson Experimental Forest. He is the co-creator, writer and host of the Emmy-award winning ETV nature program Expeditions with Patrick McMillan.

Dean Norton serves as the director of horticulture at Mount Vernon. A Clemson alumnus, Norton's various programs concerning 18th century gardens have been sponsored by the Smithsonian Institution, American Association of Botanical Gardens and Arboreta, American Horticultural Society, U.S. Botanical Garden, Maryland Historical Society and Colonial Williamsburg.

Tim Drake is the state programs manager for Clemson University's Department of Pesticide Regulation. He holds three Clemson degrees and remains actively engaged within the Clemson community and surrounding area. During his career, Drake has served as president of the Belton Area Museum Association, secretary of the Pendleton Historic Foundation Board, and member of the Anderson County Museum Advisory Committee and the Clemson University Heritage Advisory Committee.

Sally Reeves is the co-author of the award-winning New Orleans Architecture series. She served two appointments as archivist for the New Orleans Notarial Archives where she managed the archival and public access needs for over 40 million pages of bound, original civil law notarial acts dating from 1735 and written in French, Spanish and English.

Will Hiott is responsible for the overall operations of the department of historic properties at Clemson University. Highlights of his tenure include the relocation of the Hanover House to the South Carolina Botanical Garden, the restoration of Fort Hill and the preservation planning for Hopewell.
